European External Action Service preparatory work gains momentum

Two weeks after the Madrid political agreement on setting up the European External Action Service (EEAS), a package of recommendations on its organisation and working methods was approved by the European Parliament on 8 July 2010. Following the vote, Catherine Ashton, the High Representative of the Union for Foreign Affairs and Security Policy and Vice-President of the Commission, made the following statement:

“[…] Since tabling my proposal in March, the institutions of the EU have worked tirelessly with a shared vision. Today we are closer to realising this vision, but a lot of work remains to be done. I will continue to put my energy into this so that we can establish an effective service as soon as possible. The Commission will now have to give its final consent before the Council adopts the decision later this month. […] I want a lean and efficient Service that assures best value for money, staffed by the best and the brightest from across the European Union.”

The European Union has among its key objectives supporting a more stable, prosperous and secure environment for its citizens as well as to contribute to international peace and security. In order to better achieve this, the Lisbon Treaty lays the basis for greater coherence in the Union’s foreign policy. By bringing together its many levers of influence in a more effective manner and pursue a wide range of goals on the international scene, it will increase the Union’s political and economic influence in the world.

High Representative Catherine Ashton condemns the attacks in Uganda

High Representative Catherine Ashton made the following statement on 12 July:

“I condemn the bombing that killed a large number of people in the Ugandan capital Kampala. I am deeply saddened by the loss of life resulting from these attacks, and send my condolences to the people of Uganda and the families of the victims. These cowardly attacks against innocent civilians gathered in celebration of international sport shows a shocking disregard for human life and basic social values.

We must not allow these attacks to undermine the efforts to help bring stability to the region. The EU stands ready to continue its close cooperation with Uganda.”

Human rights and gender advisers meeting in Brussels

The Council of EU’s services organised a meeting of the human rights and gender advisers and focal points from CSDP missions on 5-6 July. EU member states as well as representatives of NATO and the African Union participated.

The meeting was dedicated to identifying lessons from mainstreaming human rights and gender aspects into the practical work of CSDP military operations and civilian missions. The outcome of this meeting will form the basis of a first civil-military as well as a first thematic CSDP lessons learnt report, to be presented to the EU member states in the autumn. The report will take stock of experience to date and identify best practices and practical working tools that may render the work more effective and well structured across missions and operations.

The promotion of human rights and gender equality remains a key component of EU foreign policy and should be mainstreamed across all EU instruments, including crisis management and longer-term development cooperation. The creation of the European External Action Service offers a unique opportunity to further enhance the interplay and synergies between the different EU policies and instruments, including with regard to the promotion of human rights and gender equality within crisis management.
