

The future

The EU and China celebrated in 2010 the 35th anniversary of the establishment of diplomatic relations. As both partners are playing more active and responsible roles on the international stage, the EU and China are negotiating a Partnership and Cooperation Agreement to cover the range and complexity of their relationship.

In 2003, the European Union and China launched a comprehensive strategic partnership. This is based on a joint commitment to tackle global challenges, from climate change to financial regulation. The EU is China's biggest trading partner, while China is the EU's largest source of imports and second largest two-way trading partner.

Framework for cooperation

The main goals of EU policy towards China are to:

- ▶ Broaden and deepen dialogue with China, both bilaterally and on the world stage;
- ▶ Support China's opening-up process and its transition to a society based on the rule of law and respect for human rights;
- ▶ Encourage China's ongoing integration in the global economy and trading system, while supporting the economic and social reform process;
- ▶ Raise the EU's profile in China to enhance mutual understanding.

The EU and China hold annual summits and regular political, trade and economic dialogues. They also engage in more than 50 sectoral dialogues and agreements, ranging from environmental protection to industrial policy to education and culture.

Global challenges

- ▶ The EU and China recognise the urgent need to fight climate change. They are committed to a Climate Change Partnership to strengthen cooperation on low carbon technology and to exchange views on key issues in the international climate change negotiations.
- ▶ They are working together to tackle the financial and economic crisis, stimulate global recovery and reject protectionism.
- ▶ Both have pledged to maintain peace and stability and to improve international cooperation in a spirit of equality. They are committed to addressing the challenges of development and to resolving disputes peacefully.

Closer partners, growing responsibilities

Trade and investment

In 2008, the EU and China launched a High-Level Economic and Trade Dialogue. This is a platform for tackling issues of mutual concern in the areas of trade, investment, market access and protection of intellectual property rights.

Human Rights

Human Rights are mainly discussed between the EU and China as part of their regular political dialogue as well as during specific Human Rights dialogues, held twice a year since 1995.

Strategic Dialogue

To reflect the depth and breadth of their strategic partnership, the EU and China decided in 2010 to upgrade their talks and deepen their bilateral relations on foreign and security matters and also on global challenges such as the recovery of the global economy, climate change, etc. This EU-China High-Level Strategic Dialogue is co-chaired by the HR/VP Catherine Ashton and State Councillor Dai Bingguo, China's most senior interlocutor on Foreign Affairs and Security Policy.
