The Arabic Network for Human Rights Information considered the comportment of the U.S ambassador in Cairo Anne Patterson in this response to be a factor of escalation in the campaign led by Egypt's Minister of Planning and International Cooperation. Patterson has violated the transparency and authenticity rules by refusing to uncover the names of the funding organizations.

Responding to the calls to uncover the funding sources of the Muslim Brotherhood, Dr. Ahmad Abu Barakah, one of the Muslim Brotherhood's Freedom and Justice Party's leaders said the Muslim Brotherhood enjoyed a legal status since it was established in 1923.

Abu Barakah denied having received any foreign funds in the group. He described the allegations about the group's "secret funds" to be mere "illusions."

On the other hand, Dr. Yasser Burhami, vice president of the Salafi Call said Egypt was a sovereign state and the United States, or any other country, did not have the right to interfere in Egypt's internal affairs.

America has banned donations to Islamic organizations under the pretext of fighting terrorism, so doesn't the Egyptian People have the right to defend itself against the foreign conspiracies that aim at dividing Egypt?! Burhami wondered considered compliance with such conspiracies to be treason.

A Member of Parliament Sues the Speaker

In what is described as unprecedented step, MP Hamdi al-Fakharani said he would sue the Speaker of the People's Assembly Daad al-Katatni.

Al-Fakharani said he had to take the step after the offense he felt when the security guards of the People's Assembly prevented him from accessing the building to resume his sit-in after having left for a while to buy medication.

A group of MPs had decided to stage a sit-in in the Parliament to protest the Ministry of Interior's comporment.

On his part, al-Katatni said he provided all the facilities for the MPs who wanted to stage the sit-in. However, he gave instructions to the security to prevent the access of anybody to the Assembly after all MPs have left.

Military court adjourned the “virginity checks” case to a session on February 13. The case became more ambiguous as the two witnesses who were called to testify in the case of Samira Ibrahim, one of Tahrir protesters who was subjected to a forced virginity check, denied that any virginity checks were conducted on female protesters arrested from Tahrir Square.

Ibrahim’s lawyer called for testimony the head of military unit in which protesters had been imprisoned and requested adjourning the case.

The two witnesses were Fawzeya Sobhi and Abir Rashad, female warders. They testified that none of the female protesters who were detained were forced to take off their clothes or were subjected to virginity checks.

Samira Ibrahim told Al-Tahrir newspaper that she was shocked that the court called for testimony two female warders who were not present at the time she was subject to the virginity check. “One of the two witnesses retired a year ago, so how can she testify to an incident that took place after her retirement?” Samira asked.

نهاية فبراير الجاري، هو الموعد الذي حددته رئيس المجلس الاستشاري، منصور حسن، للإعلان عن قراره بحسم ترشحه للانتخابات الرئاسية من عدمه. لكن ذلك لم يمنعه من الترحيب بقرار اللجنة العليا للانتخابات بفتح باب الترشح في 1٠ مارس المقبل، حيث اعتبره استجابة لمطالب مجلسه المعاون للمجلس العسكري.

حسن قال إن الفارق بسيط، ولا يجب التوقف

عنده، ما بين التوقيت المعين ١٠ مارس، الذي قرره اللجنة، والتوقيت المقترح ٢٢٠ فبراير، الذي سبق أن طالب به المجلس الاستشاري. ورئيس اللجنة العليا للانتخابات الرئاسية، المستشار فاروق سلطان، رد على الجدول الدائر حاليا، بسبب عدم تحديد جدول زمني واضح، لإجراء العملية الانتخابية، والاكتفاء فقط بالإعلان عن فتح باب الترشح، وقال إن «الجدول لا يمكن تعديده حاليا، إلا بعد اجتماعات تعقدها اللجنة، لتحديد تفاصيل وإجراءات إنعام العملية الانتخابية على أكمل وجه».

اللجنة، حسب سلطان ستبدأ الأسبوع المقبل، التنسيق مع وزارات التنمية المحلية والداخلية والدفاع لتوفير متطلبات عمل اللجنة من موظفين ومقر رئيسي للجنة في القاهرة ومقرات فرعية في المحافظات وكذلك توفير التأمين اللازم لسير عملية الانتخاب، وبعدها يمكن تحديد الجدول الزمني للانتخابات بكل تفاصيله. ونفى أي تدخل للمجلس العسكري في تحديد موعد فتح باب الترشح للانتخابات الرئاسية، وأوضح أن اللجنة وأعضاؤها هم الذين حددوا الموعد، وأن فترة الأسابيع الثلاثة المحددة لتلقي طلبات الترشح لن تزيد إلا لأسباب قهرية وضرورة قضوية.

The Egyptian Military Delegation Cuts Short its Visit to Washington

In what the author considered to be a clear indication of the tensed relationships between Cairo and Washington, the Egyptian Military Delegation to Washington left the United States before accomplishing its task. The delegation left to protest the US’s criticism against the Egyptian authorities’ decision to refer the suspects in the NGOs funds case to the Criminal Court.

American Radio Sawa announced that the delegation had canceled a meeting that was scheduled later this week with prominent Congress leaders.

Radio Sawa claimed that the cancelation was due the White House’s and the Congress’ threats of stopping the annual US Aid to Egypt because of the trial of American NGOs.

The United States Ambassador to the United Nations Susan Rice threatened Cairo of “the serious consequences” of preventing 19 Americans of leaving Egypt. Responding to Rice, Egypt’s Foreign Ministry Spokesman Amr Rushdi stated that the Egyptian-American relations are as important for the U.S.A as for Egypt. He asserted that the case had become the responsibility of the Egyptian judiciary.

Reuters reported on Egyptian officials’ statements about Cairo being willing to retreat because this conflict might cause serious economic consequences on Egypt.

Senior Judge Amr Roshdi, spokesman for the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, said that Egyptian-American relations are important to both countries and there are mutual interests between them.

Al-Akhbar received information that the US Department of State has summoned the Egyptian ambassador in Washington to ask him about the procedures taken by Egypt against civil society organizations and the accusations directed against American citizens working in them.

People’s Assembly Holds MOI Responsible for Bloody Clashes

After a heated session yesterday, the People’s Assembly, headed by Dr. Saad El-Katatni, agreed on the recommendations of the committee that investigated the clashes through a field visit to the Ministry of Interior and the surrounding streets.

Based on the recommendations of the committee, the People’s Assembly held the MOI responsible for killing and injuring protesters and obliged the ministry to immediately halt all forms of violence used against them in the area surrounding the MOI building.

The committee also advised protesters to return to Tahrir Square to allow a chance to distinguish between real revolutionaries and thugs.

The recommendations also included obliging the MOI to initiate a purge of the ministry from corrupt figures and improve its performance.

Al-Katatni said that the legislative and complaints and proposals committees will finish the bill on ensuring and organizing the right to demonstrate and hold a sit-in. He also said that the MOI is the authority responsible for providing security in the country and everyone should work to support them in their attempt to restore security and stability.

MP Hatem Azzam demanded a purge of the MOI and arresting all thugs who are out on the streets. He demanded appointing a new Minister of Interior and holding all those responsible for killing protesters accountable.

Internet Coverage (08/02/2012)

We are all Khaled Saeed:

The report of the Fact-finding committee and the Health Ministry's statement confirm the death of 8 Egyptians with gunshots and birdshots in Interior Ministry and Suez clashes. The MOI hands are stained with the blood of Egyptians. If he cannot purge the Ministry, he must leave his post.

Many comments say we ignored the casualties from police and army personnel. We are only mentioning the Health Ministry's report.

We dream of a country that respects human rights, a civilian authority elected by the people and an independent country that gains the world's respect.

The Interior ministry in the last 4 days did not make us forget our main cause. We will never forget the 74 Egyptians who died in Port Said; also we won't forget the 8 who died protesting the Ministry's tyranny.

Egyptian Cabinet:

People's Assembly took a number of decisions:

The Ministry of Interior must be purged.

Demonstrations should remain peaceful, and must be restricted to sit-ins and protests. Protesting should not include attacking governmental institutions or facilities.

Protestors must leave Ministry of Interior vicinity and return to Tahrir Square, to distinguish protestors from thugs.

A legislation that protects the right of peaceful demonstrating must be drafted.

The Minister of Interior delivered a speech in front of the People's Assembly.

Muslim Brotherhood Secretary-General: Civil Disobedience Unacceptable Now, Peaceful Protests Suffice

Dr. Mahmoud Hussein, Secretary General of the Muslim Brotherhood (MB), asserted that the group does not support calls for civil disobedience on Saturday, February 11, and urged all Egyptians to double their work efforts and positive endeavors to help build, not destroy, the homeland, and so not to take part in this strike.

In a press statement, Hussein said, "This is very dangerous to the interests of the homeland and its future. It means a general strike that will stop the railway service and virtually all transport, factories, institutions, universities and schools, and will stop payment of monies owed to the government (taxes - electricity, water and gas bills). He pointed out that all this would exacerbate the already difficult situation in the country (economic, social and services). This will lead to the state's disintegration and downfall.

Dr. Hussein called on those responsible for this action to listen to the sound of reason, wisdom and logic, and to place public interests above any trifling, limited (personal - categorical - party) interests, and to work hard to save this their homeland and their people, and to drop this destructive action.

He continued, "If someone intends to demonstrate on that day, this is their right. However, this should be done in a peaceful, civilized way, with exclusion of anyone intent on sabotage and destruction from the ranks of patriotic demonstrators. A protest cannot be both peaceful and destructive at the same time".

The MB Secretary-General added, "We succeeded, with the Grace of God, in electing a People's Assembly (PA) that truly represents us all. It is only appropriate for us now to turn to that elected PA with our demands which it shall meet. We have to be patient, though. Demands are many. And the new PA has to effect reforms of thirty years of rampant corruption, which cannot be done in one day. We must not lend our ears to the media which resort to excitement and agitation and call for violence, sabotage and destruction.

MB and the Gulf States

As the Muslim Brotherhood ascends to power, a question remains on how the once "banned" group will handle the issue of ties with the Arab Gulf states.

Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates are today the two states in the Gulf that are most skeptical of the Muslim Brotherhood. And yet these are precisely the two countries that Egypt's Brotherhood must try its best to build bridges with. Saudi Arabia and the UAE are, after all, the two largest economies in the Arab world, and the biggest investors in Egypt despite what other Gulf countries claim. Almost 500 UAE firms operate in Egypt with investments valued at US$10 billion, the same amount invested by Saudis. The latter have additionally promised to grant Egypt several billion dollars in aid. It is also worth noting that 1.5 million Egyptians work and live in Saudi Arabia, while 250,000 Egyptians are residents of the UAE.

The Muslim Brotherhood, however, does enjoy a semi-recognized status in two other Gulf states. For instance, although it suffered a recent elections setback in Bahrain's previous parliament, the Menbar Society, a Bahraini offshoot of the Brotherhood, had previously held six seats out of a total of 40, in addition to the post of second deputy speaker. In Kuwait, Islamists won an overwhelming majority of seats in parliament this month with the Kuwaiti Muslim Brotherhood, known as the Islamic Constitutional Movement, winning all four seats it contested in the 50-seat body, doubling the number they had earlier held.

As of today, though, representatives of Saudi Arabia and the UAE have been alone among Gulf states in announcing their skepticism of Egypt's Brotherhood. A recent opinion column by Tariq al-Homayed, editor of the London-based Asharq Al-Awsat newspaper that is owned by Saudi Prince Salman bin Abdul Aziz, criticized what he called "disciples" who "come out to defend the Muslim Brotherhood, acting as if they are the Muslim Brotherhood ambassadors to Saudi Arabia or other Gulf states." Additionally, in a widely circulated video recording of a recent speech in Bahrain, Dubai's police chief, who enjoys close relations with the country's prime minister, warned against the Muslim Brotherhood, stating that their "threat" to the region was just as serious as that of Iran's. Additionally, I outlined in an article in Gulf News last year how a petition calling for reform sent to the UAE government by 130 academics was stillborn due to the fact that some of the signatories were affiliated with the Brotherhood in the country.

Dr. Essam El-Erian: Elected President Would Support Democratization Process In Egypt

Dr. Essam El-Erian, Vice Chairman of the Freedom and Justice Party (FJP) and Chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations at the People's Assembly (PA), asserted that transfer of power from the Supreme Council of Armed Forces (SCAF) to civilians is one of the most important ways to support the democratic transition in Egypt.

Egyptian Parliament Recommends Review SCAF Laws, Compensation for Martyrs of Revolution and Torture, Committee to Reclaim Egypt Monies

The Egyptian People's Assembly Plan and Budget Committee, in its Monday session, headed by Saad Al-Husseini, approved a draft law submitted by Ashraf Badr Al-Din, MP for the Freedom and Justice Party (FJP) and the Committee's Deputy, to raise the value of martyr compensation from 30 to 100 thousand Egyptian pounds (approximately $16,667).

@AsmaaMahfouz

Many young people were arrested during recent clashes and their future will be at stake. I wish MPs discuss their situation.

The trial session for Ahmed Douma, political activist, will be held in a while in Al-Tagamu' Al-Khames. Anyone who is capable of going there, please do, the number is very small and we must put pressure on them to release him.

It is a very bad feeling to be always expecting death, paralysis, blindness, etc. I pray that God protect Egypt and protect help us achieve victory over the oppressors.

When will the live comedy show of the parliament begin today?

@Gsquare86

I hope we view the calls for strike on February 11 as a start. People are always asking where is the role of workers? Workers are not an option we press on whenever we need their support.

We should encourage all sectors to join the strike on February 11. Workers and students should be one hand. Factories and Tahrir Square are one hand!
