Updates on Presidential Elections

The Supreme Constitutional Court in Cairo decided yesterday that the presidential elections law was consistent with the Constitutional announcement declared on March 30, 2011. The court also declared that the declaration of the final results was the authority of the High Presidential Elections Commission.

Al-Ahram's Jamal Abu al-Dahab reported that al-Wafd party called on its MPs to withdraw their documented support that had been given to a number of presidential candidates. Al-Wafd party decided not to support any potential presidential candidate until a meeting is held between the supreme bodies of the party and its parliamentary body. News has been reported about al-Wafd's intention to give its members the right to choose the candidates each member wants.

With regard to the potential candidates, Muhammad Salim al-Awwa seems to be optimistic. He is pretty sure of his victory in the first round. The worst that can come, he believes, is to run the runoff round.

The electoral campaign of potential presidential candidate Ahmad Shafiq, former prime minister declared that I could grant 20 thousand signatures of advocates in 12 governorates.

Meanwhile, Potential Presidential Candidate Amr Mussa has gained the highest number of advocates in some provinces.

However, Salafist Potential Presidential Candidate Hazim Abu Ismail has already got the right to be nominated after he had succeeded in getting 30 MP's approvals. Nevertheless, Abu Ismail has not stopped. He insists on collecting 30 thousand signatures from 12 governorates.

Potential Presidential Candidate Hamaden Sabbahi reiterated his rejection to a consensual president.

Potential Presidential Candidate Khalid Ali stressed the importance of the revival of the public sector for the national economy.

The only lady Potential Presidential Candidate, Buthaina Kamel, resumes her campaign regardless of the challenges.

Potential Presidential Candidate Ala Rizq's program concentrates of eliminating poverty.

Judge Hatim Bagato, secretary of the judicial committee entitled to observe the presidential elections reiterated the committee's honest will to facilitate the electoral procedures for candidates and voters.

On the other hand, a number of potential presidential candidates had complained against the complicated conditions and procedures of the elections, and especially those related to the ban of electoral campaign during a long electoral silence.

Bagato stated that the no ban will be on media interviews provided that they don't include any publicity for the candidate.

Potential presidential candidate Abd al-Munim Abu al-Futouh warned of rigging and forgery.

Bribery Appears in Presidential Race

With the presidential race getting underway, presidential hopefuls started trading accusations over the means under which some obtained the necessary proxies to officially become a candidate.

Presidential hopeful Mohamed Selim el-Awwa said some candidates have been buying the endorsements of the citizens for EGP 220 each.

Presidential aspirant Abdel-Moneim Abul-Fotouh warned that attempts have taken place to forge the will of the people. He urged the people not to sell their votes.

Meanwhile, the Presidential Elections Commission continued on the fifth day issuing applications for citizens willing to join the presidential polls.

On the fifth day, 92 people received their candidacy applications, raising the total number of candidates to 564.

57 Political Parties, Movements Establish Youth Parliament

Youth revolutionaries announced forming a parliament made up of 57 youth parties and movements to represent all political segments.

The parliament comprises 100 members and will hold its first session on Friday at the Ghad El-Thawra Party premises to elect a speaker and two deputies.

The newly-minted parliament’s main task will be offering advice and support to the youth.

Nour Party's Banditry Bill Draws Various Reactions

A proposal to apply Hudud (fixed Islamic punishments) on banditry/highway robbery that was submitted to parliament by Salafist MP Adel Ezzazi has drawn various reactions.

Al-Nour Party, Ezzazi's party, along with Sufi Orders had backed the bill, while the Freedom and Justice Party, the political wing of the Muslim Brotherhood, was reticent and expressed reservations about it.

In statements to Al-Masry Al-Yom, Ezzazi said he received the bill back from the People's Assembly proposals committee to re-draft it.

The streets are ravaged by crimes and that is why this bill is important, he said.

UK Turns Down Egyptian Requests to Extradite Boutros Ghali

The Egyptian authorities sent a new request to the UK to extradite former finance minister Youssef Boutros Ghali to stand trial in Cairo over several corruption cases.

Egypt had submitted before 20 requests to the UK, to which the authorities there replied with “request under consideration,” a source told Al-Gomhoria newspaper.

The source accused UK authorities of lagging in replying to the Egyptian requests.

Presidential Elections Law is Amended

الدستورية العليا: تعديل قانون الرئاسة لا يخالف الإعلان الدستوري

كتب - أحمد أبو جهر
وحسين عبد العظيم
قررت المحكمة الدستورية العليا، في
جلستها المنعقدة أمس الأول برئاسة
المستشار عدلى منصور نائب رئيس
المعكدة، أن مشروع التعديل الجديد على
قانون الانتخابات الرئاسية يتفق واحكام
الإعلان الدستوري الصادر في الثلاثين من
مارس سنة 2011.
وأوضحت المحكمة في قرارها الذي
أصدرته برئاسة المستشار عدلى منصور
نائب رئيس المعكدة، أن إعلان النتيجة
النهائية لانتخاب رئيس الجمهورية منوطاً
بوفاء لحكم الفقرة الأولى من المادة 28
من الإعلان الدستوري، ونص البند (10)
من المادة (8) من قانون تنظيم الانتخابات
الرئاسية، بلجنة الانتخابات الرئاسية
دون غيرها، بما يتواءم أن إعلان النتيجة
من قبل كل من اللجان الفرعية واللجان
العامة هو مجرد حصر عددي يسمي
لأسباب التي حمل عليها كل مرشح في
كل هذه اللجان، لا ينتج عن فوز مرشح
وخسارة الآخر، ويشين تفسير عبارة إعلان
النتيجة الواردة بنص المادة (2) - فقرة
أخيرة (28) من المشروع المعروض وفقاً
لهذا المفهوم، حتى يكون النص مطابقاً
لأحكام الإعلان الدستوري، وأضافت،
أنه فيما يتعلق باشتراك مشروع القانون
الفرعية واللجان العامة لأعمالها في
مراحل الاقتراع والفرز وتجميع النتائج
في حضور المرشحين أو وكلائهم وممثلين
من منظمات المجتمع المدني ومسائل
الإعلام، فإنه يتعين التأكيد على أن عدم
حضور من تقدم بذكرهم لعملية الاقتراع
والفرز والإعلان لا يترتب عليه بطلان
عمل لجان الانتخابات، ما لم يكن عدم
حضورهم بسبب قرار صادر من رئيس
لجنة الانتخاب دون وجه حق.

Who Will the Ultras Support for Presidency?

"A friendly meeting we held with one of the most prominent potential presidential candidates," said one of the members of Ultras Ahlawy, hardcore fans of Al-Ahly football club, referring to a meeting they held with Amr Moussa.

The Ultras member told Al-Tahrir newspaper that they held the meeting with Moussa to ask him about the policies he will take to run the affairs of the state. He said they will be holding a number of similar meetings with other presidential candidates.

Presidential hopefuls are competing to gain the votes of Ultras groups as they represent an important voting bloc.

No Negotiations... Strikes Continue

The government is continuing difficult negotiations to stop the wave of workers' strikes. The Ministry of Manpower formed joint committees from the ministry and the parliament, in addition to representatives of firms and businesses, to negotiate the demands of the workers. However, all these attempts failed and the ministry had to rely on police forces to secure the exit of its employees from the building after hundreds of workers of Al-Makarem Textile Factory surrounded the ministry's headquarters.

Also, workers in the Public Transport Authority began their strike in three garages to demand end of service benefits.

Workers protesters spread in more than eight factories in Suez to demand improvement of their working conditions and financial benefits.

Updates on Presidential Elections in al-Shurouk

News was reported about bribing people in some governorates to collect the 30 thousand signatures to support each of the potential candidates and give them the right to be presidential candidates.

In Qalyubia the signature is given for 158 Egyptian Pounds. In Kafr al-Shaykh Sabbahi is leading with the number of supporting people.

Potential Presidential candidate Muhammad Salim al-Awwa said collecting supporters' signatures cost every potential candidate nine million Egyptian Pound.

Meanwhile, sources from the High Presidential Elections Commission considered any money paid by the potential candidates on collecting signatures are considered to be bribes.

Salafist al-Nour Party participates in negotiations about an Islamist consensual president.

Potential Candidate Abd al-Munim abu al-Futouh considered limiting the electoral campaign to three weeks as forgery.

On the other hand, the secretary general of the High Elections Commission stated that the elections could be forged.

University Students Protest to Demand Student Unions Elections

A huge protest took place yesterday in front of the cabinet headquarters as more than 3000 students from over 12 universities around the country marched to demand setting a date for holding student unions elections. A delegation of three students representing the protesters will meet Minister of Higher Education Dr. Hassan Khaled to put forward their demands.

Students erected a stage in front of the cabinet building while security forces prevented them from entering the street near the People’s Assembly.

Students presented three major demands; first, opening the door for holding student unions elections next week after the elections were postponed for a full academic term. Second, issuing a ministerial decree to establish Egypt’s Student Union comprising representative from each university. Third, presenting the set of regulations of the student unions to the parliament for approval.

Students protesting declared their refusal of the statement made by the Ministry of Higher Education and they demanded an official decree that guarantees the fulfillment of their demands instead of a rhetorical statement.

Morsi: Changing the Government is a Must

Head of the Freedom and Justice Party Dr. Mohamed El-Morsi said that Egyptians are facing huge challenges to continue the revolution. He confirmed that the FJP is keen to reach a consensus with all political parties to achieve the goals of the revolution.

Morsi said that the People’s Assembly and the government should work together to achieve the interests of the country. Since the parliament reflects the will of the people now, the interests of the country require replacing El-Ganzouri’s government with a new one, Al-Morsi said. He confirmed that a new government should be formed without any delays and it should reflect the aspirations of the people as well as achieve their demands. He said the coming prime minister should be from the Freedom and Justice Party and other ministers will be chosen from other political parties represented in the parliament.

Morsi also demanded SCAF to take immediate steps to change El-Ganzouri’s government. He confirmed that Egypt is facing serious threats internally and externally and this requires appointing a new government. He said the FJP will continue efforts to withdraw confidence from El-Ganzouri’s government.

Disagreements among Political Forces on Deals with Ex-Regime's Tora Inmates

Reactions varied to the proposals made to strike deals with former regime figures, who are imprisoned in Torah, to return some of the country's stolen funds in exchange of dropping some of the charges against them.

The Freedom and Justice Party, political wing of the Muslim Brotherhood, confirmed that these deals are unacceptable. Al-Nour Salafi Party refused any attempts of reconciliation with figures of the former regime that corrupted political life in the country for decades. On the other hand, Al-Wafd Party said that reconciliation is possible only in charges related to financial corruption because it will be in the benefit of the society.

Ali Fath Al-Bab, majority party leader in the Shoura Council, confirmed that negotiating with former regime figures to return the stolen funds cannot be done because money will be recovered in any way when they receive sentences. "If we did this, then anyone will commit whatever crimes he wants, then pays some money to gain his freedom," said Fath Al-Bab.
