A wide Protests wave was provoked by the declaration of the Constituent Assembly that will be assigned to draft the constitution.

The increasing protests of different political parties and players and the withdrawal of many of its members seem to be threatening the legitimacy of the assembly.

The Administrative Court at the State Council is to consider today a number of lawsuits filed against the assembly.

MPs Amr Hamzawi, Abd al-Ghaffar Shukr, Dr. Mustafa Kamil al-Sayyid withdrew from the assembly yesterday. Al-Karamah Parys also withdrew from the assembly, accusing the Freedom and Justice Party and al-Nour Party of excluding the national players from the Constituent Assembly.

A number of parties launched a national campaign to form a draft of a constitution that meets the aims of all the national sectors in Egypt.

14 parties and political movements defended people's right to draft a consensual constitution that grants their right to freedom and justice. The parties called on all the revolutionary players to join them to protect the Egyptian civil State. The revolutionary players are to protest in front of the State Council today in solidarity with the lawsuits filed to contest the legitimacy of the assembly.

In a related context, a number of the Constitutional Court judges are to hold a press conference today to respond to the Muslim Brotherhood's communiqué that they considered as an unacceptable offense.

The Muslim Brotherhood's communiqué had described the Supreme Constitutional Court as a means used by SCAF to put pressure on the Muslim brotherhood.

In another context, the General Union of Workers' Syndicates in Egypt criticized in an urgent session that was held yesterday what it called the attempts to dominate the political activity in Egypt and the danger resulted from the comportment of the Parliamentary majority in trivializing many of the social sectors.

The problem of the Constituent Assembly reflected on the presidential race. Potential Presidential candidate Amr Mussa warned of a soon political crisis in Egypt and expressed his discontent at imposing the constitutions, making it without credibility.

كتب - مثير اديب،
قال النائب هاني نورالدين، عضو
الكتلة البرلمانية لحزب البناء والتنمية،
التابع للجماعة الإسلامية، عضو الجمعية
التأسيسية للدستور، إن الحزب لن يتنازل
عن تطبيق أحكام الشريعة الإسلامية،
وسيدافع عن المادة الثانية للدستور.
وأضاف «نورالدين»، في تصريحات

مسودة دستور سيقدمه إلى الجمعية أثناء
انقضاءها، شارك في إعدادها أعضاء مجلس
شورى الجماعة الإسلامية وقيادات الحزب،
وبعض الخبراء القانونيين، الذين استعانت
بهم الجماعة والحزب.
وشدد على أن «الجماعة استقادت من
بعض التجارب الدستورية القائمة، وراعت
في الدستور المقترح أن يحوى كل أطراف
المجتمع، وألا يراعى حقوق طائفة دون
أخرى، بل يراعى حقوق جميع المواطنين».
وقال «نورالدين»، إن «الجماعة تبنت أن

رؤية واحدة، بحيث تشارك كل التيارات
بوجهة نظرها، وتكون لها بصمة في
الدستور، بما يتفق وثقافة المجتمع وهويته،
التي لن يتنازل عنها تحت أي ظرف من
الظروف».
وتوقع «نورالدين»، أن يكون الخلاف
بين التيارات حول شكل الحكم، وهل هو
برلماني أم رئاسي أم مختلط، وقال إنها
جميعا وجهات نظر تقبل الاختلاف ولا
مانع من التوافق عليها، بما يخدم مصر
ويتناسب ظروفها.

The Construction and Development Party, the political offshoot of the Islamic Group, said it would not accept anything less than the application of the Sharia (Islamic law).

Speaking to Al-Masry Al-Yom newspaper, the party's parliamentary bloc member, Hani Nouredin, said the party will continue to defend Article 2 of the constitution and would make sure it is included in the nation's new legislation.

The party is about to finish a draft constitution to be presented to the Constituent Assembly that would write the country's constitution, he said.

The draft has taken into consideration the rights of all members of the society in line with the Islamic law, he said.

Nouredin is also a member of the 100-strong Constituent Assembly.

Abul-Fotouh Calls on Constituent Assembly Members to Reconsider Withdrawal

Presidential candidate Abdel-Moneim Abul-Fotouh said there was no reason to rush in electing members of the Constituent Assembly to write the constitution.

The hasty selection of members has led to the withdrawal of many, which is a huge loss, Abul-Fotouh said in a statement Tuesday.

The Constituent Assembly should be representing all segments of the society and the withdrawal of some members would not make it possible, he said.

He called on the members, who have withdrawn, to reconsider their decision, so that constitution becomes balanced and fulfills the aspirations of the people.

MB Announce Beginning of Mobilization for Demonstrations

A member of the MB's shoura council told Al-Shorouk newspaper, "The MB formed a committee to coordinate efforts with other political forces for the million-man march next Friday. Sultan: Forging Presidential Elections is Impossible

Senior Judge Farouk Soltan, head of the Supreme Constitutional Court and head of the Presidential Elections Commission, criticized the statements made by some political forces in which they attacked the Supreme Constitutional Court and questioned its independence from the ruling authorities.

In a statement given to Al-Shorouk newspaper, Soltan said these statements are nothing but “unjustified fabrications which are not supported by any evidence.”

Soltan said the general assembly of the Supreme Constitutional Court held a meeting to discuss these accusations. The judges decided to delegate Senior Judge Maher Sami a press conference to refute all the arguments claiming that the Supreme Constitutional Court submits to the powers of the military council. They denied that SCAF practiced any pressures on the Supreme Constitutional Court in the case related to the invalidity of single-member constituencies in the People’s Assembly.

Soltan stressed that the Presidential Elections Commission practices its role with transparency and integrity and that all its decisions correspond to the provisions of the law.

The April 6 Youth Movement was the mastermind of attempts to storm the Suez Canal Authority premises in Port Said governorate during recent protests, investigations revealed.

The April 6 members have hired thugs and outlaws to storm the building, confessions made by suspects arrested in the aftermath of the events showed.

According to the detainees, the group's members have followed the same pattern during the Mohamed Mahmoud and Cabinet incidents in Cairo.

For its part, the April 6 Movement (Democratic Front) denied it had participated in the events that took place outside the Suez Canal Authority building, which occurred early this week.

The movement always commits to peacefulness and will remain against violence, riots and thuggery, it said in a statement.

Egyptian Cabinet

Prime Minister Dr. Kamal El-Ganzouri approved the demands of Public Transport Authority's workers to raise their end of service rewards.

Muslim Brotherhood Statement on Obstacles Hindering Power Handover to Elected Civilians

Throughout the transitional phase, in post-revolution Egypt, the Muslim Brotherhood has, thus far, taken a prudent, astute approach, invariably serving the interests of the people and the homeland. The Brotherhood believes that completing the democratic process, by establishing the constitutional State institutions, to which the Supreme Council of the Armed Forces (SCAF) will hand over ruling power, is the right, effective and safe way to achieve the objectives of the revolution and fulfill the hopes and aspirations of the people.

This approach has resulted in the election of the People's Assembly and Shura Council, which took over legislative authority from SCAF. Furthermore, today the election of the Constituent Assembly to draw up the new constitution is underway. Executive power remains in the hands of SCAF and the Cabinet. However, although the Ganzouri government had its chance to prove its performance, unfortunately it failed even more disastrously, more spectacularly than previous governments, as demonstrated in the following:

A weak and inconclusive statement at the People's Assembly, rejected unanimously by all nineteen specialized parliamentary committees.

Port Said Stadium disaster, tragic enough to force immediate resignation of the entire Cabinet.

The flight of foreign defendants in the case of NGO foreign funding, after the Prime Minister's assertion that Egypt would not kneel before pressures, and the Minister of International Cooperation (Faiza Abul-Naga)'s announcement that the accused had been plotting against Egypt for the benefit of the U.S. and Israel, with the government then claiming that it did not know anything about the accused fleeing, despite its claims of assuming the full powers of the President of the Republic.

Seeking to squander State funds, estimated at tens of billions of dollars in order to leave the state treasury empty for the Cabinet that succeeds it.

Failure to recover money looted and smuggled out of the country by icons of corruption and big-time thieves and robbers.

Fabricating daily crises in the necessities of life: butane, gasoline, diesel fuel and daily bread troubles.

Announcing that Egypt's hard currency reserves are plunging critically, and the lack of transparency in the case of the deposed president's private accounts.

Failure to promptly solve the problem of public transport drivers.

Nevertheless, when demands are made for the current government to resign, its head refuses persistently and is, absurdly, supported by SCAF; which raises obvious questions about the secret behind clinging so tenaciously to losers and evident failures. Is it a desire to abort the revolution and destroy the people's belief in their ability to achieve their goals? Or is there an intention to defraud or influence the forthcoming presidential election?

Even more absurd are threats to challenge the constitutionality of the People's Assembly through the President of the Supreme Constitutional Court; which is ludicrous. Is the Constitutional Court under the authority of the executive branch? Is the law or the Constitution what really governs the relationship between state authorities? or threats and manipulation of the constitution?

In fact, that inane constitutional challenge is only focused on the prescribed percentage for election candidate lists and the prescribed percentage of the 'individual' candidates. However, SCAF had discussed this percentage issue with all Egyptian political parties, forces and stakeholder, and also with members of the Supreme Constitutional Court. The election process was then approved by the Legislative Committee headed by the Minister of Justice (Al-Ahram Newspaper, 24 September 2011). Going back to threats regarding something that has been so thoroughly studied, discussed and approved by members of the Supreme Constitutional Court, is an unworthy form of blatant blackmail.

Keeping this Cabinet in power, especially as we approach the presidential election and the referendum on the Constitution, certainly raises doubts about the fairness and integrity of both the forthcoming election and the referendum. Further, the continued deterioration in the conditions of the people is one of many things that the people can no longer tolerate or suffer silently. Ultimately, if someone is trying to recreate the defunct, corrupt former regime with new faces, the people are able and willing to recreate the great revolution, to protect and save its vessel before it sinks to the bottom at the hands of people who do not appreciate this tremendous legal and national responsibility.

We do hope that things would not reach that point, and we hope that everyone shall work conscientiously for God first, and then for the benefit of the people and the homeland, placing them high above all narrow personal and factional interests.

May Allah protect Egypt and its people from sedition, strife and all evil. And may He help us fulfill the hopes of all the Egyptian people for freedom and dignity, sovereignty, progress and a real renaissance.

Freedom and Justice Party Executive Office Statement - Sunday, 25 March 2012

The Freedom and Justice Party (FJP) Executive Office held its weekly meeting, on Saturday 24 March 2012, and discussed the latest economic, social, and political developments in Egypt, the current government's rapidly deteriorating performance, and attempts to subvert, demean and discredit the democratically elected parliament.

At the end of the meeting, the FJP Executive Office stated that:

The FJP Executive Office warns that obstacles deliberately put in the way of Egypt's march towards full democratization ultimately hurt public interests and delay the hoped-for stability and better future which should resolutely rectify the negative effects left over by the former regime whose chums and cronies are still endeavoring to wreak havoc on the people's daily lives.

Maliciously, vengefully fabricated crises of petrol, diesel and cooking gas shortages have shown up the government's failure to adequately address those challenges and the attempts to subvert the Egyptian revolution and restore the corrupt defunct regime to power. This only reinforces our conviction that the current government, which has given nothing to the Egyptian people except contrived crises in all fields, must go.

The FJP Executive Office lays full responsibility on the ruling Supreme Council of the Armed Forces (SCAF), which currently holds virtually all executive authority, for the increasingly negative impact of this government remaining at the helm. We believe it insidiously creates problems, which it aims to bequeath unto the forthcoming government. Clearly, this is both a shameful disgrace and an imminent danger to the revolution and its goals.

The FJP Executive Office asserts that the Egyptian people, who entrusted both elected Houses of Parliament with their confidence, will not let this parliament be politically blackmailed into taking political and economic decisions that do not fulfill the desires and aspirations of the great Egyptian people.

Evidently, parliament's resolve to combat corruption perpetrated by the defunct former regime in all state institutions has worried the symbols of this entrenched corruption, threatened their influence and made them rattle their tails, creating hurdles, hindrances and confusion.

What the government itself has revealed regarding the responsibility of the father-in-law of Mubarak's son for the current petrol and diesel crisis is true evidence of this. The obvious question, therefore, is: how could officials leave symbols of corruption in their positions, until now, without taking any steps to protect the nation and realize its ambitions.

The FJP Executive Office has observed the steps taken in the presidential election process until now and the problems reported so far. Consequently, we are more than fairly concerned about the integrity and the transparency of the upcoming elections and the possibility of it being defrauded, rigged in favor of a particular candidate who some may want to force on the Egyptian people.

We, however, assert that the people who made the revolution and participated in elections for both the People's Assembly (PA) and the Shura Council will not allow election fraud again or have anything imposed upon them, whether an opinion or a candidate.

The FJP Executive Office is still considering the possibility of fielding a presidential candidate. The party's competent authorities are looking into suggestions to nominate one of the FJP or Brotherhood leaders to run for president in light of the many recent developments in the domestic and international political arenas. When a final decision is made in this regard, it will be announced to the public.

The FJP Executive Office denounces the performance of several media outlets owned by businessmen who are chums and cronies of the old regime and symbols of corruption and sleaze. Those media organizations foment sedition, division and chaos among the Egyptian people, while chanting the slogans of the revolution as cover.

Nevertheless, the Egyptian people, who saw and heard them praise the old regime, still remember their tears for the ousted president after his 1st of February 2011 speech, as he tried to deceive the people. But God exposed them and their crocodile tears on the morning of the 2nd of February 2011 with the Battle of the Camel. The Egyptian people know these shape-shifting chameleons and their goals very well, as they put all their money – the sources of which should be investigated – into defaming the Egyptian revolution, spreading chaos, and undermining the gains the Egyptian people have so far attained.

The FJP Executive Office reiterates that the candidates nominated by FJP's Parliamentary Commissions in the PA and the Shura Council for membership in the Constituent Assembly to draft the constitution represent all factions and denominations, ideologies and institutions. This is meant to ensure that the new constitution enjoys broad consensus and meets the demands and aspirations of all hues of the Egyptian people.

Clearly, this was confirmed in the results announced at dawn today, which showed that the Constituent Assembly includes all political parties and representatives of the various syndicates, authorities, organizations and associations, as well as Muslim and Christian institutions, in addition to artists, authors, journalists, workers, farmers and prominent public figures. The FJP has evidently not monopolized the Constituent Assembly as some have claimed.
