MOLDOVAN LABOUR MARKET FORECAST 2014

January 2014. It is the sixth year in a row the EU funded project "Consolidation of migration management capacities in the Republic of Moldova" supports the elaboration and launch of the Moldovan labour market forecast.

The labor market forecast 2014 is the result of an excellent work done by the employees of the National Employment Agency with the support of Swedish and Lithuanian experts. The main donor of the labour market forecast 2014 is the Ministry of Justice of Sweden. It facilitates the matching of labour market needs with education supply, sets the trends in occupations for the coming year and makes the labor market more transparent.

In the case of Moldova this can be explained through internal mobility of graduates from one occupation to another, not enough supply from education field, poor qualification of graduates (impedes the employment process). Nevertheless the decisive factor remains to be migration of labour force abroad. Missing a recognition of occupations and professional experience in the receiving countries (mainly EU), Moldova faces a severe brain waste and brain drain. This situation determines the involved parties to take action since migration cannot be stopped, but it can and should be managed better.

THE BETTER BUSINESS OF CLEAN ENERGY

17 January 2013 - Moldova's move towards renewable energy supplies has brought a boom in the biomass fuel business. Since the fuel is relatively clean and inexpensive, it's a triple win for consumers, businesses and the environment.

Entrepreneur Oleg Donoaga set up one of the country's first companies to transform plant debris into biomass briquettes and pellets, which can be burned in special furnaces for heat. In just two years, AgroBioBrichet has grown from a start-up enterprise to one of Moldova's major producers, manufacturing enough fuel each year to heat 30 public buildings.

"We took a risk in an underdeveloped market," Mr Donoaga recalls with pride, surveying a thriving factory where workers shovel piles of straw and agricultural waste into machines that compress them into log-like briquettes. These are easy to handle and transport, and burn efficiently. Every tonne replaces about 800 kilogrammes of coal.

Mr Donoaga credits a partnership between the European Union and UNDP with helping his business get off the ground—part of a whole new industry that takes Moldova closer to a future of sustainable energy use. The partnership stands behind the largest renewable energy project in the country. It takes a two-pronged supply and demand approach.
