'Rights of Migrants in Action' project launched, Nepal to be one of the beneficiary countries

The 'Rights of Migrants in Action' a 42 month project co-funded by the European Union and managed by the International Federation of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies has been launched.

Nepal is one of the beneficiary countries for the projects. The detailed actions for the project will be published soon.

The project aims at fostering a coordinated approach of CSOs toward the protection of the rights of migrants, to enhance migrants' access to social services, and to build and strengthen the capacities of these CSOs to advocate for the rights of the migrants.

The final beneficiaries will be the migrant population, in particular the most vulnerable groups (women, children, migrant domestic workers, victims of human trafficking and of other severe rights violations within migration contexts), their families and potential migrants from the following origin, transit and destination countries in different regions of the world.

The European Union has stated that responding adequately to the needs of migrants in today's global economic and political context is obviously not a simple challenge. The effectiveness of activities in the domain of migration and development largely depends on the identification and establishment of strategic partnerships among civil society organisations (CSOs), between CSOs and governments at central and decentralised levels.
