> Syrian Crisis Response

The conflict in neighboring Syria has had implications for Lebanon in terms of economy, social affairs, political and security issues. The most visible impact has been the influx of refugees from Syria. Lebanon has been the main recipient of refugees from Syria with more than 1.18 million registered in the country by mid-March 2015. The European Union has responded by providing substantial humanitarian assistance to the refugees in Lebanon e.g. health, shelter, water, sanitation and hygiene and cash. At the same time, the EU has allocated an even larger amount in assistance to Lebanese institutions and communities in dealing with the additional pressure they are facing as a consequence of the conflict. This support focuses on medium to long-term needs and on linking relief with recovery and development. Following the Third International Humanitarian Pledging Conference for Syria held in Kuwait in March 2015, the allocation of the European Union and its 28 Member States has reached €3.57 billion in response to the conflict in Syria and its spill-over into neighboring countries – €1.8 billion through the various instruments of the European Commission and more than €1.77 billion from the 28 EU Member States. While more than 30% of the funds are committed to humanitarian interventions inside Syria, an increasing amount goes towards alleviating the pressures in neighboring countries, Lebanon, Jordan, Turkey and Iraq. Out of the 3,988,857 Syrian refugees in the region by 14 April 2015 (registered or awaiting registration by the UNHCR) 1,196,560 have requested assistance from UNHCR in Lebanon (regularly updated numbers can be found on <https://data.unhcr.org/syrianrefugees/regional.php>).

In addition there are more than 44,000 Palestinian refugees from Syria. The number of Lebanese returnees is estimated at around 17,500. So far, the European Commission has allocated €486.2 million to the response in Lebanon:

€277.1 million has already been allocated through the European Neighbourhood Instrument - ENI (formerly called “European Neighbourhood and Partnership Instrument - ENPI”) and the Instrument Contributing to Stability and Peace –

ICSP (formerly called “Instrument for Stability – IFS”) budgets focusing on assisting Lebanese structures respond to the crisis.

The Directorate General of the European Commission for Humanitarian Aid and Civil Protection (ECHO) has so far pledged and contracted €209.1 million for humanitarian assistance in Lebanon.

The Regional Development and Protection Programme (RDPP) is a three-year seven-donor initiative managed by Denmark to support Lebanon, Jordan and Iraq to better understand, plan, mitigate and, where possible, maximise the effects of Syrian refugees' forced displacement into their countries. In addition to this, it will work with national and international actors to provide better protection to those displaced by the Syrian conflict and create socio-economic development opportunities for the most vulnerable.

The RDPP is a platform of seven donors (EU, Denmark, Ireland, Netherlands, UK, Norway and Czech Republic) joining up humanitarian and development funds to support host countries from a long-term perspective, acknowledging the reality that refugees will be displaced for a long period of time; that the humanitarian approach, while necessary, has to be complemented with development-led strategies; and recognizing the need to support hosting communities and refugees to better face these challenges.

Financing instrument	Polish Aid
Date of project	2012 – on going
Implementing partner	The Polish Centre for International Aid (PCPM)
Beneficiaries	Syrian refugees

Since 2012, the PCPM Foundation has been implementing a project in the Akkar province called “Aid for Syrian refugees: providing shelter and securing health” financed under the framework of the Polish Aid grant. As part of the Polish funds, the PCPM has been distributing financial means from the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, which when combined provide assistance to 1,100 families (approx. 5000 people) from 25 villages across the Akkar region. PCPM is the longest established humanitarian organisation supporting Syrian refugees in Lebanon in terms of covering the costs of accommodation.

The continuous inflow of refugees, who, in some areas such as Bire, outnumber the Lebanese citizens, poses a number of problems, such as limitation of shelter space and medical care. That was one of the reasons why PCPM launched a small clinic to provide basic health care for the refugees. The PCPM provides aid not only thanks to the financial support provided by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and UNHCR resources, but also by actively seeking support from private and commercial donors such as Dominika Kulczyk - Lubomirska, who agreed to finance the clinic in Bire. All those PCPM initiatives play an important role in giving aid to the Syrian refugees, as well as the Lebanese government, while demonstrating Poland’s dedication to humanitarianism.

The DRC programme supports emergency shelter and distributions of emergency items. Another key component is the implementation of community support projects (CSPs). CSPs are a core element of DRC's holistic approach aimed at building the resilience of communities highly impacted by the ongoing crisis. The process by which the CSPs are selected is based on: 1) Needs assessments conducted together with host and refugee communities, including municipalities, community representatives and youth (gender balanced), followed by group sessions to identify common priorities for a particular area. 2) The identification of small community support projects in each of the municipalities. Project selection goes through a completely open and transparent consultation process; getting input from a wide representation of the community thereby increasing the sense of community ownership of the projects, and breaking potential barriers between host and the refugee communities.

> Humanitarian Aid

Based on FAO's "Agricultural Livelihoods and Food Security Impact Assessment and Response Plan for the Syria Crisis in the Neighboring Countries", the emergency project on livestock vaccination and targeted animal feeding is expected to enhance food security conditions of the population affected by the ongoing Syria crisis.

Ultimately, the project aimed to assist local farmers to retain their livestock assets – their only source of income and their access to nutritious animal protein.

The project directly assists: (i) Lebanese livestock-keeping communities including those hosting Syrian refugees; (ii) Lebanese returnees who have crossed into Lebanon from Syria; (iii) Syrian refugees who have crossed with their livestock into Lebanon; (iv) veterinary professionals (including private veterinarians) who are directly involved in field veterinary services; (v) community animal resource development workers (CARDWs) identified from the livestock-keeping communities. The Lebanese MoA was also expected to benefit from the capacity building of its staff in emergency preparedness and response and from support in preparing national control strategies for LSD, FMD and PPR.
