Toha Syuhada is committed to transforming the paradigm surrounding environmentally friendly policies in the fields of climate change, education, business, and investment. He aims to shift the perception that combating climate change is a burdensome expense, promoting the understanding that these costs are long-term investments with significant benefits. By fostering a collaborative approach that integrates sustainable practices into all levels of decision-making, Toha hopes to drive innovation, economic growth, and societal well-being. His vision includes contributing to the global effort of limiting temperature rise to below 1.5°C by securing robust financial support for sustainable projects and educating policymakers, businesses, and investors on the economic and environmental advantages of proactive climate strategies.

Toha Syuhada's involvement with the Youth Sounding Board offers him a valuable opportunity to enhance his personal and professional development, gain new skills, and expand his network to benefit his community. Beyond personal aspirations, Toha is dedicated to supporting his peers in youth organisations by addressing significant challenges such as limited funding and lack of guidance. He aims to facilitate better access to resources, foster stronger partnerships, and provide clearer direction based on expert insights. By implementing projects like energy-independent village development, mangrove planting, international green job internships, and green sector startup development, Toha hopes to empower youth organisations to effectively implement their initiatives and contribute significantly to Indonesia's Net Zero Emission 2060 commitment.
