EU-Russia Expert Network on Foreign Policy (EUREN)

The EUREN network was initiated by the EU Delegation to Russia, in cooperation with the Russian International Affairs Council, at the beginning of 2016 as a new form of interaction between EU and Russian foreign policy experts, analysts and think tanks.

EUREN brings together approximately 40 foreign policy experts and think tanks from Russia and EU member states to discuss relevant foreign policy issues with the aim of exchanging views and formulating policy recommendations.

The Network meets on a quarterly basis in Russia and different EU capitals.

Encouraging participation in EU-Russia relations

“We have initiated this network to create an additional channel of communication between Russian and EU experts on questions such as how can we overcome the current impasse in our relationship, but also what are the common challenges to both Russia and the EU, and which are the areas of future cooperation we can identify.”

Markus Ederer, European Union Ambassador to the Russian Federation.
EU-Russia Expert Network on Foreign Policy (EUREN)

In a more connected and complex world the EU and Russia need to do their utmost to find common ground and search for solutions for a broad range of pressing global issues. The purpose of EUREN is to contribute to that process by providing leading experts from both sides with a platform for open and constructive debate.

EUREN Interim Report – October 2018

If they want to change the negative dynamics currently underpinning their relationship, both Russia and the EU need to leave their comfort zones. In its Interim Report, the EU-Russia Expert Network puts forward recommendations as to how they could do this.

EUREN at the Alpbach Forum

At the European Forum in Alpbach on 26-27 August 2018 EUREN members presented the EUREN Interim Report and discussed EU-Russia relations, including with Ambassador of the European Union to Russia, Markus Ederer, European External Action Service (EEAS) managing director Thomas Mayr-Harting, and other high ranking officials and decision makers.

The project hosted numerous events in Russia on topics such as climate change, preventing gender-based violence, global value chains or ethics in journalism, which represent core values of the European Union. A broad range of different event formats was used, including roundtables, international conferences, festivals and a “culture train” from Moscow to Vladivostok. Nine roundtables, which covered topics in the areas “trade–energy–economy”, “environment and climate change” and “society” attracted more than 4,000 participants.

Gender roles in Russia and the EU

Gender roles are a fiercely disputed issue in Russia and in many countries in the world. The EU considers the rights of women and girls a key value. Project events on gender roles were met with great interest. They included an international symposium on “Women, Men and the Brave New World – Gender Roles in Russia and in the EU” and a conference on “Preventing and Combating Gender Violence”, which both took place in Moscow. EU Experts involved in those events came from Bulgaria, Germany, Great Britain, Finland, France, Italy, Hungary, Slovenia and Sweden. Moreover, a study visit took a group of Russian social workers to Sweden to acquaint themselves with Swedish policies and practices regarding domestic violence.

Series of 12 lectures in the framework of the International Mobile Symposium NEMOSKVA

As series of 12 lectures on contemporary art took place in the framework of the International Mobile Symposium, organized in cooperation with the NEMOSKVA project, from 16 August to 9 September 2018. Leading specialists in the fields of humanities and art held lectures on the development of modern culture in 12 cities on the route of the Trans-Siberian Railway Network. They came from Belgium, Bulgaria, Greece, Germany, Bulgaria, Great Britain, Latvia, Romania, Poland and Portugal.

Selected Russian audiences have been directly exposed to more complete information about the European Union and EU policies, and have had a chance to review their own perception and understanding of the EU and of its external relations agenda and goals, as well as of a number of bilateral and global issues.

Global value chains (GVC)

1 million parts

No one country does that on its own

Openness and Integration of the EU and Russian Economies. Global Value Chains
Today, airplanes are assembled from one million different parts, and not one country manages that singlehandedly. Software constitutes over a third of the value of a car.

Global Value Chains (GVCs) and the importance of linking domestic industries to open and competitive global economic processes were the main topic of the international conferences organized in cooperation with the St. Petersburg State University on 17 October 2017 and the Immanuel Kant Baltic Federal University in Kaliningrad on 19 February 2018.

Lessons of 1968
Experts from the Czech Republic, Slovakia, Poland, Germany, France and Russia discussed in Moscow how the events of 1968 are remembered in different countries and revisited some of the myths that appeared over time.
“Since the Metro is so crowded, and streets are jammed, cycling should be a good alternative all year round. Start to get people on bikes in summertime. Make events to promote it and build infrastructure. Take space from the cars (if you dare)”

Moscow Winter Cycling Congress

“The EU possesses very good tools for successful cooperation with its external partners including Russia. It has a credible welfare system, sound transformation potential and the ability to position itself on the global scene”

Artur Nowak-Far, a Polish lawyer

Speakers from the EU to Russian public events

Public Diplomacy. EU and Russia facilitates the participation of high-level experts in events in Russia. Study visits for Russian professionals to the EU

Inviting Russian professionals to substantiate their own view on the EU and contribute to disseminating more accurate information on the EU and its positions to the rest of the Russian society is the best way to provide first hand information. Some of these visits are listed below.

100 Russian professionals coming from many different regions benefited from this opportunity.

The motto was: EU fact-finding: come and see the facts!

“I was greatly impressed by the Karlhorst Museum, because it shows the history of WWII from two sides. On one stand you can see photos that show the plight of our cities and their inhabitants, and nearby - the everyday military life of the Germans. I liked very much that Germany recognizes the fact that the war was really cruel to the inhabitants of the Soviet Union...”

Ethics in Journalism

The conference “Professional Standards and Ethics of Journalism in the Digital Age. Views from Russia and the EU” took place at the Yeltsin Centre on 16-17 May 2018. The conference aspired to understand the challenges journalism faces today. Journalism still depends for its legitimacy on the observance of ethical principles and practices. To preserve credibility, journalism needs to maintain a commitment to telling the truth, deal with conflicts of interest, protect sources, and know when to respect privacy.
Building relationships and mutual understanding
Looking forward to two more years of activities

In the past two years the public diplomacy efforts of the EU Delegation to Russia have made a big step forward. They were met with a real demand in the Russian public to interact, meet, discuss and dispute. There were and there are many different fields of common interest and mutual needs, which can be addressed only together. Among them: how to live peacefully in Europe and beyond; how to fight climate change and keep our planet safe; how to shape gender relations in all their aspects; how to come to terms with our common European history; how to support professional and honest journalism that can contribute to a better future for our societies, and most important of all, how can we better understand each other.

To achieve all this, people need to meet and to talk. To meet, people need to travel and meetings need to be organized. To talk meaningfully, meetings and events need to involve as many different opinions as possible.

“Public Diplomacy. EU and Russia” will continue to work in this direction for two more years.
