

Community Policing

Community policing approach is implemented in the Kyrgyz Republic and Republic of Tajikistan by Saferworld and supported by INL since 2014

Social partnership between citizens, police and self-government authorities creates safer environment and improves security in communities

Trust - Cooperation - Interaction

102,783 citizens in Batken, Osh and Jalal-Abad provinces have an opportunity to participate actively in joint community security provision

1,556 community members trained in community policing and more than 30 local initiatives were supported to address community security issues, such as radicalization leading to violent extremism, domestic violence, gender inequality, early marriages, bride kidnapping, and improving police-public cooperation

More than 100 police officers took part in community policing trainings, and now actively engage with communities to improve security

Renovated Local Crime Prevention Centers in 19 municipalities coordinate interaction between communities, law enforcement agencies and local authorities to ensure better security for communities

Citizens in 19 communities work together with Neighbourhood Police Inspectors in crime prevention and solving local security issues.

95 youth and women leaders engaged actively in community policing campaigns address security concerns of vulnerable groups, including women, youth and ethnic minorities.
